BOURBON COUNTY WHOLESALE FOOD DIRECTORY

A resource for producers and buyers

By The Healthy Bourbon County Action Team

USING THIS DIRECTORY

This directory exists to make it easier for local foods to reach wholesale buyers in Bourbon County, KS.

How can I use it?

Contact a potential buyer or producer to set up an introductory meeting. Use the information in each listing to guide your conversation. Address relevant issues of production practices, post-harvest handling, packaging, ordering and delivery logistics, marketing, pricing and product availability, and invoicing. Establishing clear communication and shared understanding of purchase expectations will help ensure you start a productive relationship with a new buyer or supplier.

Plan pre-season arrangements with local food partners with whom you enjoy working.

How can I be in the directory?

Wholesale buyers and producers who would like to be included in the future should contact: Rhonda Dunn, Bourbon County Food Alliance Chair; rdunn@fscity.org; 620-223-0550.

BUY & EAT | MEET & GREET

We can make a difference in our community's food system.

Choosing to use food dollars locally can impact our community's access to fresh food and strengthen our local economy. The Healthy Bourbon County Action Team, Live Local and the Fort Scott Area Chamber of Commerce sponsored an event to introduce entities that buy and sell food to promote and grow the utilization of locally produced, fresh, food. From that event we have developed this directory.

EAT LOCAL

Buying local allows you to ask the farmer about their common practices in growing and harvesting their crops. The more you know, the more you can buy with confidence!

Supporting local food production expands consumer choice and fresh food access, supports rural economic revitalization, improves negotiating power of local producers, provides incentives for entrepreneurship and innovation, and protects the food system against severe shock.

Next time you are planning your menus or food retail items, consider purchasing from your local farmers: you won't be disappointed!

We're Black Dogs Farm, and we're here to solve the bee crisis. And rescue dogs. And shear sheep. And basically anything else we feel like doing on our family-owned- and-operated farm.

Somehow it was an in-flight magazine article, not his wife's hysterics, that made Bryan realize what a crisis this was. But living in the Kansas suburbs, he and Barbara felt powerless to help the situation. And they couldn't accept that.

So they got a map. And drew a circle around Kansas City that spanned 100 miles. And started looking for land where they could raise bees.

Then, in 2010, they found it. Eighty acres just outside of Garland, Kansas. Black Dogs Farm—their Act II. They knew starting a small farm at age 50 would be a challenge, but they felt empowered to make a difference. Not just with bees, but with rescue dogs too. And sheep. And just good, honest farming.

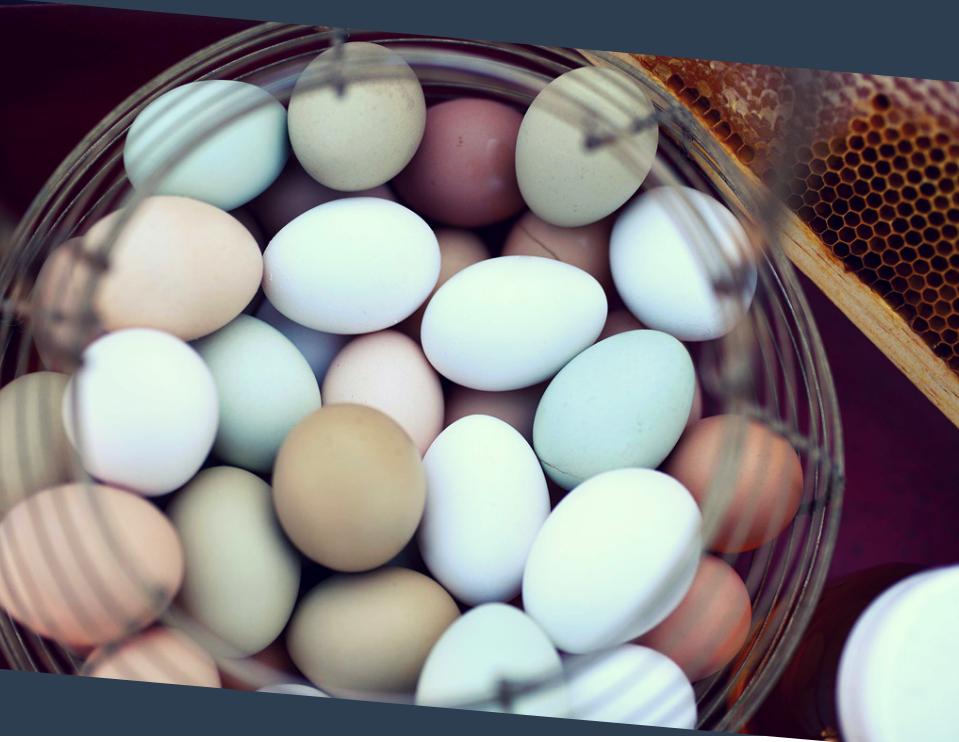

Today Bryan and Barbara live on Black Dogs Farm full-time and continue to support the honey bee population by maintaining hives on behalf of fellow bee activists all over the country. They are passionate about providing locally made goods, and hope to inspire others that it's never too late to do what you love.

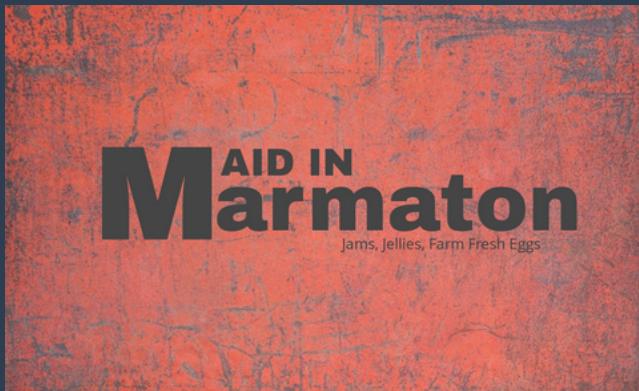

They sell free range eggs, lamb, artistic woolen garments, and honey from their hives.

Stacey Atkins is President of Fort Scott Farmers Market, a wife, a mom, a farmer, and a business woman. Her farm, Maid In Marmaton, is located West of Fort Scott in an area that used to be called the town of Marmaton.

Stacey started selling produce and value added products like jams and jellies because she has always loved gardening and feeding people. She has been selling goods for a few years now and plans to eventually build a "pick your own" style of berry farm. For now she will stick to offering chicken and duck eggs, various flavors of jams and jellies from various fruits, vegetables and baked goods.

Her chickens free range during the day to act as a natural pesticide for the garden without having to use harsh chemicals. Stacey tries to focus on growing heirloom variety produce, starting from a seed. She loves growing and being outside so truly is a labor of love.

Stacey Atkins sells free range chicken and duck eggs, jams, jellies, various vegetables, and baked goods.

Check out her Farmer's Market booth every Tuesday and Saturday May-October at Skubitz Plaza in Fort Scott.

Pathways incorporates several strategies aimed at integrating people at risk with a faith community. AgPath is a tactic of Pathways. The overall goal is to re-establish a sense of belonging and develop kinship within local churches and with those on the margins of our community. The three-year goal is to have people of faith working side by side with program volunteers within an agricultural environment.

The project has been made possible through community and individual support. Although Pathways is sponsored by a local church, it is nondenominational in nature and labor is largely volunteer. They obtained the use of two acres and farm equipment through a local farmer that shares a mutual vision. Pathways AgPath was the recipient of the BCBSKS Pathways to Healthy Kansas and Healthy Bourbon County Action Team Year 2 Project to increase access to healthy food. This generous grant was used to purchase equipment and needed resources.

The first year is a learning period, both in the production/distribution of food and the development of relationships.

The program donates food to the local food bank and feeding family's project, and sells to local stores and coffee shops. Their passion stems from a strong belief that as Christians they are to have a concern for, and take an active role in, the overall health of the community in which they live.

Pathways AgPath sells sweet corn, peppers, tomatoes, green beans, and squash.

What began as a simple landscaping job turned into a hobby bigger than they could imagine. Chet cut an old locust tree down on their property and his father-in-law suggested he till up a garden in its place. Chet and Linda were both raised on a farm so growing vegetables wasn't new to them.

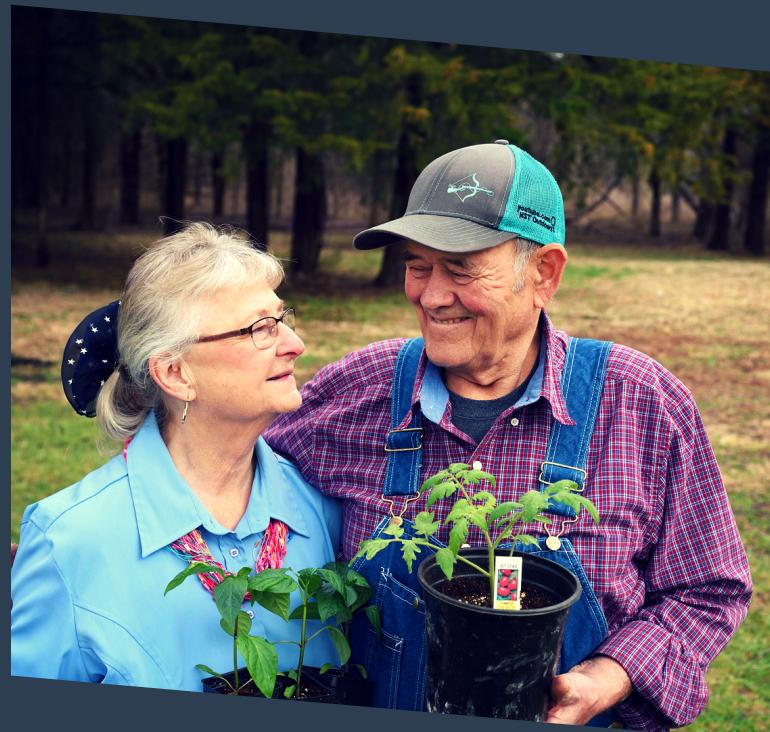

The Bowers spent all weekend, every weekend, gardening, canning, pickling, and making salsa. Soon they were growing more produce than they could keep up with so off to the Farmer's Market they went and have been hooked on it ever since - going on 19 years.

Each year brings new challenges and solutions. In the beginning, Chet worked as a bridge builder and tri-owner of a construction company. His work often took him away from home during the week so he spent his weekends gardening before retirement in 2003.

Before Fort Scott Farmer's Market was open two days a week, Linda, who worked as a secretary at Community Christian Church, would load up her car with veggies on Wednesday, park in the shade, and head straight for Nevada Farmer's Market after work.

They are thankful to have a Farmer's Market Tuesday and Saturdays and even more excited about bringing their local produce to our community restaurants and food retail.

Chet and Linda's one acre garden is located at the back of their property behind a pond which is used for watering the garden. The irrigation system was installed 3 years ago versus dragging the hose from one end to the other.

The Bowers offer five kinds of lettuce, spinach, broccoli, kale, radishes, onions, beets, potatoes, snap peas, tomatoes, peppers, zucchini, yellow squash, cherry tomatoes, heirloom tomatoes, and green beans.

Check out Linda's Farmer's Market booth every Tuesday and Saturday May-October at Skubitz Plaza in Fort Scott.

At 22 years old, and before their first anniversary, Aaron and Rebekah Houser had already purchased their first farm animals - a couple milk goats from the Amish community north of Fort Scott. They didn't really have a plan for the goats at the time, but they both loved animals and knew they wanted to have their own businesses and be their own bosses. Rebekah's passion for freelance graphic design and Aaron's for agriculture seem like the perfect match to make those dreams come true!

Now, at 25, they've expanded to sheep, meat goats, cows, and plan to expand to pork and pastured poultry next year.

Tea House Meats - a play on "Team Houser" - is more than just meat, though. Soon they'll offer herbs, spices, teas, honey, vegetables, and meat rubs, too.

The Housers are committed to sustainable agriculture and raising healthy, happy animals with just one "bad" day in their lives.

They're going back to the basics by working with what God gave them - grass. They're chemical-free and provide a diet that's as grain-free as possible too. Pasture-raised everything to provide the best quality meats and produce the most natural flavors possible.

The Housers offer pasture-raised beef, lamb, and goat meat. Pork, chicken, honey, herbs, spices, teas, vegetables, and meat rubs will be available soon.

The BUTCHER
BLOCK^{LLC}
Quality Meats

1735 S National Ave. Fort Scott, KS 66701

TOOK THE PLEDGE

The Butcher Block opened in 2016 when Geoff and Carrie Southwell saw a need in the community to offer quality meats and products with exceptional customer service. The emphasis to make locally-produced food available is abundantly clear when you walk through the doors—but they are constantly seeking more. Some of the meat offered at The Butcher Block is locally raised and a large portion is Kansas-raised.

They have expanded their selection beyond meat to a variety of other products including pickles, pickled jalapeños, and cheese—most of which are reproduced within the state of Kansas.

Buying local is important. The more money we spend locally, the more that stays in the community.

common ground

TOOK THE PLEDGE

Common Ground is more than a coffee shop. It is an invitation to hang out with others, catch up on some studying, or just find a little solitude, all while enjoying specialty drinks and scrumptious foods.

Common Ground is a non-profit organization owned by The Fort Scott Church of the Nazarene. We strive to bring our community closer and provide a "Common Ground" for meetings, parties, study sessions, and more. We welcome all who wish to stop in and we enjoy the company of newcomers as well as our regulars. Any profit that Common Ground makes gets put back into our community in one form or another.

TOOK THE PLEDGE

We are proud to offer the very best in beef, pork, and garden fresh fruits & vegetables. If you are looking for dairy specials, frozen favorites, deli delights, or bakery specials, you just as well get the best!

"We provide only fresh and tasty products."

Lupe and Mirna Santana, owners of La Hacienda in Downtown Fort Scott, grew up in different parts of Central America. Together, they now live in Kansas, still a much different culture than where they gained their heritage. Food is love and something they know brings people together.

To them, the main key is to support each other and to remember it takes team work.

"A community is a familiar thread used to bring people together to advocate and support each other in the fight to overcome threats. As human beings, we need a sense of belonging and that sense of belonging is what connects us to the many relationships we develop."

"Food brings people together."

Mildred Store

100 years and counting

TOOK THE PLEDGE

Mildred Store is a 100+ year old store located in Mildred, KS: a very small community in northeastern Allen County that serves the surrounding counties of Anderson, Bourbon, and Linn.

Mildred Store, formerly known as Charlie Brown's Store, was famous for their deli sandwiches, a tradition that is carried on today. Owners Loren and Regena Lance like to use Kansas products as much as possible and have a deli filled with several Kansas products, including Fanestil meats and Alma cheese.

Mildred has a rich history and has gone from boom town to ghost town in the last 100 years. Mildred Store carries a wide variety of groceries, produce, fresh cut meats, and other supplies ,including anything from fishing supplies to old-fashioned Christmas candy. On the 3rd Saturday of every month, come and enjoy free, live country music and a sandwich, all while taking in all the nostalgia of the store.

115 W. Wall Ft. Scott

TOOK THE PLEDGE

Miller Feed is known for their warm welcoming environment that caters to farmers, ranchers, and the local community.

Miller Feed has been operated by third-generation owner Geoff Southwell and his uncle since 1993. Miller Feed opened in 1948 by Geoff's grandpa on the square in Downtown Fort Scott.

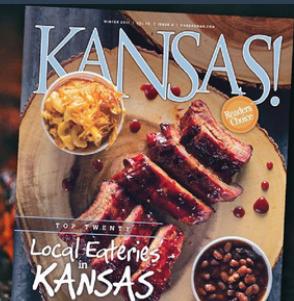

In 1971 the store was moved to its current location. Miller Feed is going back to its roots by offering a variety of locally produced food in the store. Although Geoff didn't grow up in Fort Scott, he came to the community to visit his grandpa a lot and spent most of his time at the feed store. These childhood memories grew a strong sense of nostalgia and he became attached to the business. Geoff and his wife Carrie moved to Fort Scott in 2014 because Fort Scott offers a feeling of trust, community, and the want to build relationships larger cities aren't able to offer.

Historic Downtown
Fort Scott, Kansas

TOOK THE PLEDGE

David Ben and Tina Lipe have been around – from Manhattan, KS to The Lake of the Ozarks, from Texas to Kansas City —they're serious about building places where people love to go. When you enter Sharky's Pub and Grub in rural southeast Kansas, you will discover a fun, family-friendly atmosphere that has a little something for everyone. Whether you are an avid sports enthusiast, seeking locally produced food, planning an event, or just want to catch up with an old friend, Sharky's Pub and Grub is the place you want to go.

Sharky's is very excited to announce menu options that will include locally produced food and is very interested in building relationships with local farmers and producers. A new lighter side menu will be the perfect spot for local farms to be highlighted in each of the dishes.

"It's a great atmosphere to just relax with either the family on a night out, or to have a few with friends."

UNION STATION

TOOK THE PLEDGE

A small-town filling station turns into the only food outlet for Uniontown residents.

20 years ago Ron and Susan Eldridge built Union Station when community members voiced a need. Today, he is responding to another need: access to fresh quality food.

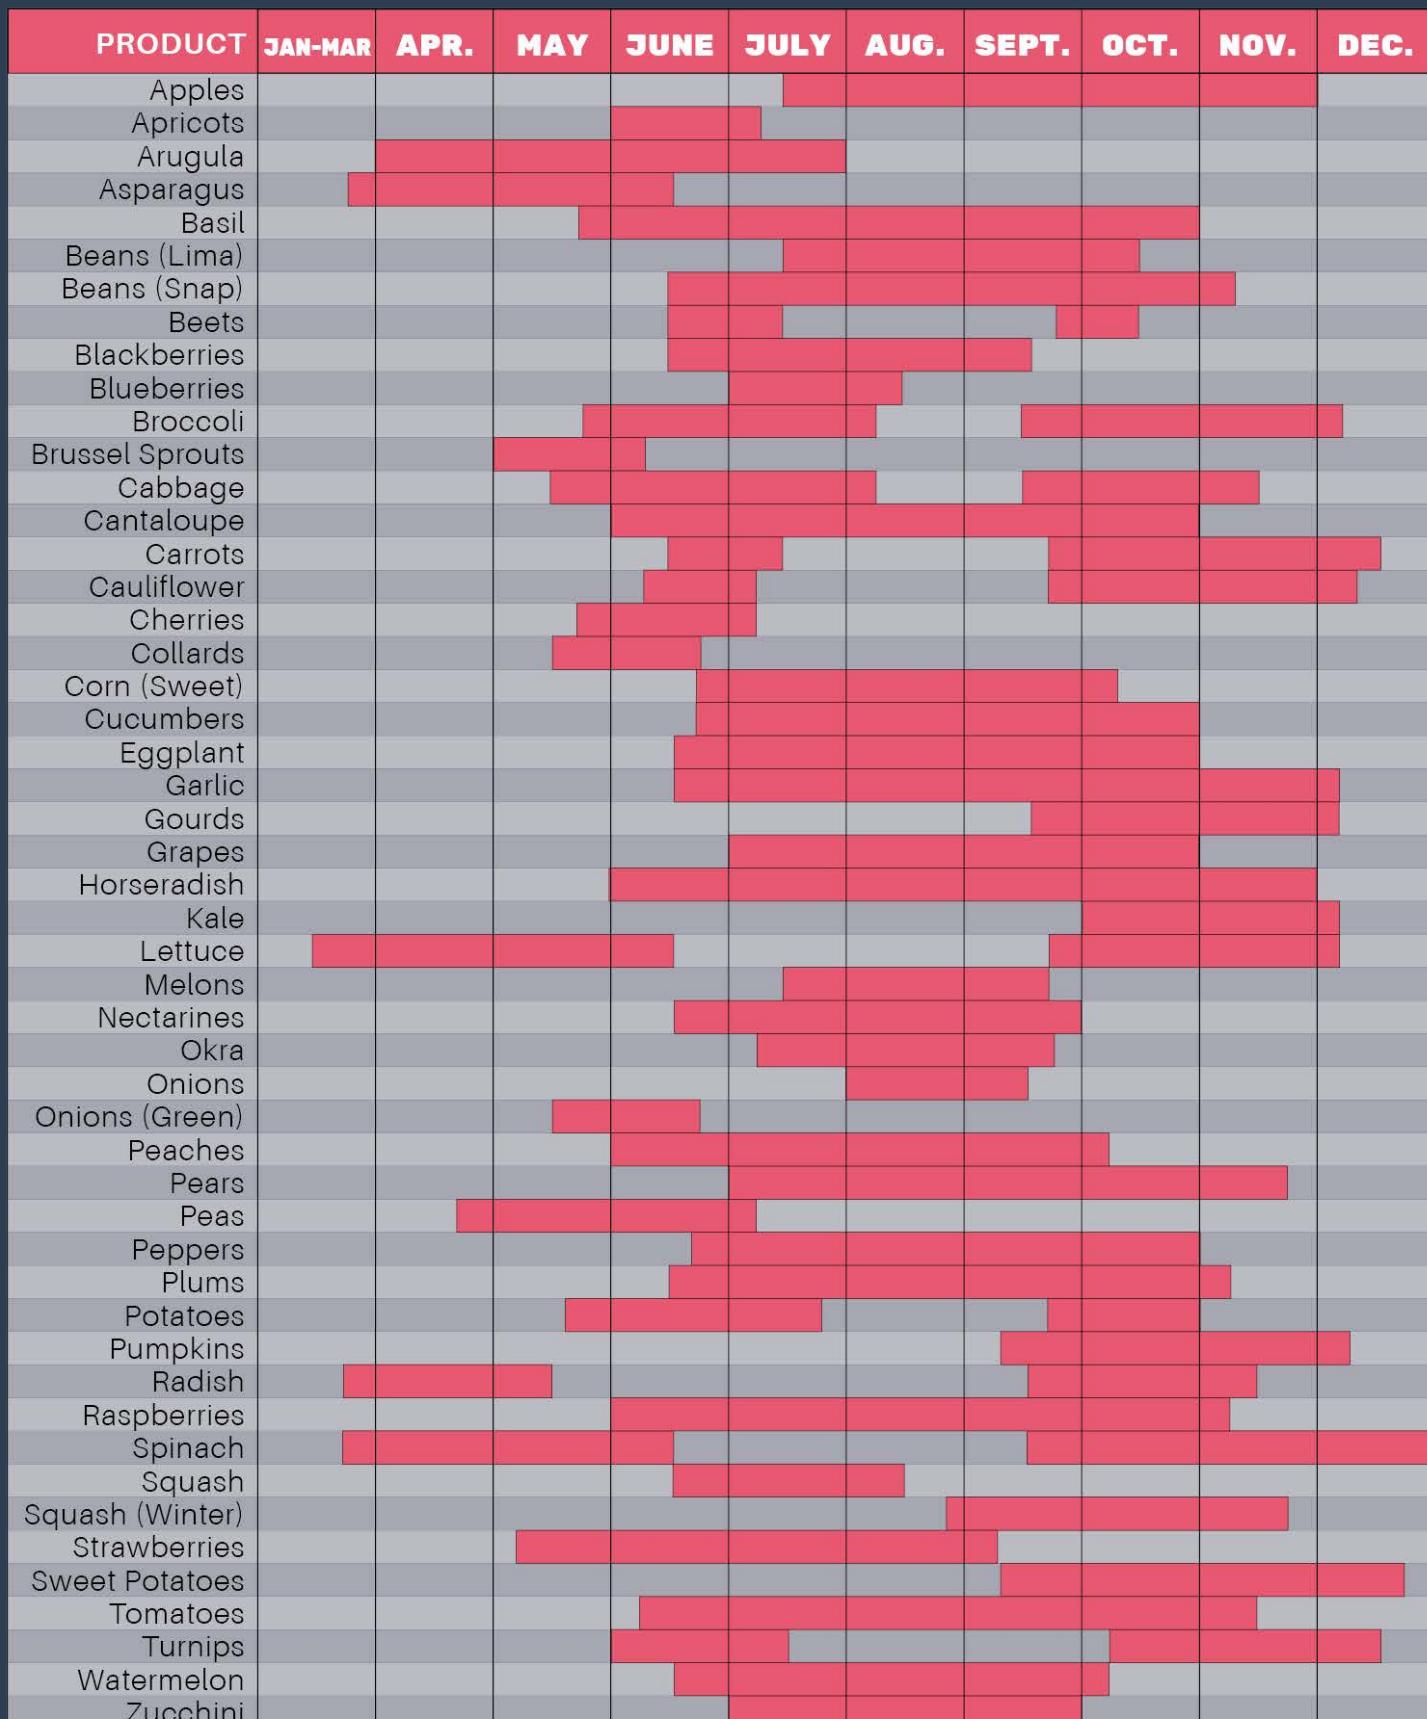

Ron doesn't see offering locally produced food as giving his business any great gains. He sees an opportunity to give our friends, children, and neighbors the option to choose healthy.

In addition to selling fuel, the station has become a small retail food outlet, restaurant, coffee club, and social gathering.

Stop in, buy some fresh produce, eat lunch or just visit with long-time manager Schotze Griffiths.

PRODUCE AVAILABILITY

Year-round: Honey, Meat, Mushrooms.

A BCBSKS Pathways to Healthy Kansas Community

YEAR 1 FOCUS

Our focus for year one was increasing physical activity. Playgrounds, complete streets, and trails are just a few of the ways we are working to build a healthy community on a systemic level. The Healthy Bourbon County Action Team is working to build a sustainable built environment that encourages play and recreation.

2017 COMMUNITY CHAMPION

During the year one event, local champion, Frank Halsey, was honored for his grassroots initiative to build biking trails. While not alone in his efforts, his leadership demonstrates how one person can be an agent of change, engage community members, and increase awareness of a healthy lifestyle.
